Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Ask yourself, what part do numbers play in your life? I have learned that numbers are an indelible part of all our lives. No matter your race, religion or circumstances, numbers are as attached to us as we are to our own skin. Immediately upon asking yourself that initial question, the most common number that may come to mind is your date of birth. From there one might consider that they have five fingers on each hand, five toes on each foot, two ears, two eyes, their age, weight, height, waist size, dress size, shoe size, time of day, month, year, etc, etc. Taking that thought process a half-step further, you find your social security number, street address, phone number, monthly bills, your many account numbers and the list goes on. Another half-step further reveals yet more numbers: the speed limit, prices, floor number, start time at work, employee number, etc, etc. By now, you get the point that everything we experience with our five senses can be expressed and represented by numbers. Some numbers change over time, like our weight and height while others are static and remain unchanged, like our date of birth. In either case, everything can be expressed through numbers; everything has its numbers. Even the very letters we use to form the words we speak in all languages have a numeric representation. You will discover once you delve deeper into what numbers mean, as I did, that they have a language all their own. Just as your parents that created you gave you a name, this language that the universe speaks gave you a number and it is around you...
