Doan yer break nuttin. His sable helpers quietly removed the slender mahogany and rosewood pieces to the adjoining rooms. They laughed at Sam s new-found note of dignity and authority. He was acting butler to-night in Uncle Ren s place. No servant was allowed to work when ill - no matter how light the tasks to which he was assigned. Sam was but twenty years old and he had been given the honor of superintending the arrangements for the dance. And, climax of all, he had been made leader of the music with the sole right to call the dances, although he played only the triangle in the orchestra. He was in high fettle. When the first carriage entered the grounds his keen ear caught the crunch of wheels on the gravel. He hurried to call the mistress and young misses to their places at the door. He also summoned the boys from their rooms upstairs. He had seen the flash of spotless white in the carriage. It meant beauty calling to youth on the hill. Sam knew. Phil came downstairs with Custis. The spacious sweep of the hall, its waxed floor clear of furniture, with hundreds of blinking candles flashing on its polished surface, caught his imagination. It was a fairy world - this generous Southern home. In spite of its wide spaces, and its dignity, it was friendly. It caught his boy s heart. Mrs. Lee was just entering. Custis eyes danced at the...
