Excerpt: . at harvest or house-cleaning time; and many were the words of surprise that were said to me--words that in my girlish sensitiveness I interpreted to mean disapproval--when it was known that I, the minister's wife, knew no more than a child about the mystery of butter and cheese-making; and as for a half-day's washing or ironing, was no more fit for it than a baby. This was what they said, and this was how they reconciled themselves to my keeping a maid-of-all-work, a bright, cheerful little maid, who has never left me, though her then brown hair is as white as her mistress is now--my faithful Mehitable. How often I was made to feel those days, that many a staid matron thought it would have been far better if Ralph had chosen for his wife a real helpmeet--such as one of...
