Poet Kerri McCaffrey's first book is effervescent with color and hope and song. You will breathe easily as you read. Kerri's words are alive with her childhood experiences, as when she describes the legendary woman in white who fell to her death from a ledge in Sleepy Hollow: her dark hair like feathers her scream bright orange a flaming oriole to a synesthete. Kerri writes from both sides of the gender line, having undergone sweeping changes in her life. These were moves which required daring by this world's standards but Kerri knew there was something more at play something beautiful and very close that most sense but cannot see just beyond, a thin veil of separation and she trusted this as she made her decisions: . . . today is lovelier than ever and ever and my soul has broken the body's water I see the world as so fair today that I may die I am close to seeing the other side to seeing ghosts and God. Kerri's poetry and images flow from a clear well, fed by her deep belief in the sanctity of nature discovered by spending countless hours in wild places far from cars, cell phones, and safety. She believes that our Higher Power is aware of us while we are here and is, anxious to use booming rockets and end this exile propel us home but we looked at earth in contemplation at the silent wood sorrel blooming from the loam. Travel with Kerri McCaffrey and experience the breathless beauty of her journey the reverence she has for new life. You will read about tornadoes, magic, wilderness, the genders, baseball, hope, animals, the passing of time and teaching. Kerri has taught for eighteen years, and has a special place in...
